KISS

The hard-rocking band has new card set for first time in 20 years

By Kurt Samuels

Ah, yes, I remember it well.

It was the summer of 1979. I was in sixth grade at Tippecanoe Elementary School in Milwaukee. Despite being hotter than hell outside, I'm dressed in blue jeans, wearing a blue jean jacket and black suede "Gass" shoes, but so are the 10,000 or so other guys jammed in MECCA Arena, so I'm not out of place.

Cornerstone will issue a nine-card KISS preview set in June and a master KISS 90-card set in late July.

Some band opened up; not that I or anyone cared. What I remember is "Hey, Milwaukee, you wanted the best and you got it! The hottest band in the world – KISS!" From there it was a frenzy of screeching guitars, fake blood and vomiting fire (sort of like my first day in college).

Like my first love, my first car and my first nipple piercing, there's no way I'll ever forget my first KISS concert.

The year of 1979 looked to be the last ride for KISS as we knew it. While that year's album release "Dynasty" sold more than 3 million copies and climbed to No. 9 on the Billboard LP chart, 1980's "Unmasked" failed to sell one-third that mark.

In addition, 1979 was also the last year KISS performed live with all its original members: Gene Simmons, Paul Stanley, Peter Criss and Ace Frehley.

Criss left (or was forced out of) the band due to alcohol and drug problems. And while Frehley was still a member per se, he was being replaced steadily on the albums by session guitarists because of his drug and alcohol problems.

Four years later, KISS removed its trademark makeup to help boost record and ticket sales.

This, along with the heavy metal revival of the mid-1980s, brought the band back to platinum status. But no matter how well the band did, every KISS fan wanted to know when the original band would reunite.

Former Cards Illustrated and Comic Book Business editor Don Butler met Gene Simmons at a Marvel Comics event in 1992.

A KISS fan, Butler asked Simmons if the band ever planned on going back to wearing make-up.

"Do people ever go back to wearing diapers?" Simmons asked.

"Yes, some do," Butler replied. Simmons laughed.

I remember first hearing the original members of KISS were getting together to do an MTV Unplugged performance.

I was talking on the phone with fellow KISS fan and FPG President Michael Friedlander, who broke the news to me. This is how the conversation, which could have been stolen straight from a scene of "Fast Times at Ridgemont High," went:

Friedlander: You know KISS is getting back together to do an MTV gig?

Me: No way!

Friedlander: Yes way!

Me: Nah, really?

Friedlander: Serious.

Me: Dude, man, I'm pumped.

The MTV Unplugged performance was good. But the news that the band was going to get back together with make-up, costumes, fake blood and all was even better (You think Simmons got sized for a pair of Pampers after announcing the reunion?).

And the shows didn't disappoint. They were all sold out, allowing KISS to gross (in more ways than one) $40 million on live shows. In 1997, the tour is still going strong, selling out arenas all around the world.

In addition to the tour buses rolling, the marketing machine is starting to spin out of control.

There's a new line of toys, comic books, an animated series, videos, albums and, of course, trading cards.

KISS has appeared on trading cards before. There are two sets by Donruss in 1978. Donruss also produced Rock Stars, a set which included the unlikely quartet of The Babys, The Village People and Queen.

There are also 21 other Donruss KISS cards that appeared in Fun Packs, in which Donruss took excess product and repackaged it to create more sales.

These Fun Pack KISS cards featured Eric Carr, who replaced Criss on drums. KISS made its last card appearance in 1992 on Pro Set's Superstar Musicards set.

But as rumors of an upcoming KISS reunion began to surface in 1995, so did rumors of possible new card sets of the band.

At this time, Phoenix-based Cornerstone Communications began making inquiries into acquiring the license.

According to Cornerstone's Walter Rowan it began like this: After sending information about the card company to the band's lawyers, Cornerstone received information from Sony Signatures, which is the band's marketing group.

Cornerstone put together a "demo group" of cards using the photos in the tour book provided by Sony.

KISS appeared in two Donruss sets in 1978, along with Fun Pack cards. Pro Set brought the band back for an appearance in its 1992 Superstar Musicards set.

"They were very impressed," Rowan said.

But as the two sides were coming together on a contract, Sony instead offered the first rights of refusal on the KISS license to Sports Time because of their partnership in the Beatles license.

Sports Time was interested, and it looked as if Cornerstone was out of the picture. In fact, the company posted on its web site that Sports Time would be the license holder.

However, in the end, Sports Time and Sony could not come to terms, leaving Cornerstone with the license.

For Cornerstone, KISS is not like any license the company has had in the past. Almost all of the company's previous licenses have had an overseas flavor, with the British Dr. Who and Monty Python to the Japanese Akira and Robot Carnival.

KISS, though it has a worldwide following, is very American and very popular in this country. For Cornerstone, KISS is more than just a license, it is the company's biggest opportunity to increase its name and product recognition and to become a major player in the entertainment card market.

This point isn't lost on Rowan: "It's very important because it is a flagship title; a door-opening title," he said. "People who have not heard of us now want to find us. There are a lot of entertainment companies coming to us wanting to know if we will license their particular title. We have never had that before.

"Usually it's us that courts others. This is a very, very, very fragile market. Some titles can make or break a company. We hope that this title makes us."

To make this title work for them, Cornerstone will develop the KISS license into its signature series, such as Inkworks has done with James Bond, Topps with Star Wars and Fleer/ SkyBox with Star Trek and Marvel.

KISS will not be a one-series item; it will be a multiple-series set.

"We'll be running through at least 1999 on this one," Rowan said. "There is no real portfolio out there that you can get information or photographs from different photographers," he said. "All the information is going to be encapsulated into our card set so it would be a great reference for fans."

Is there a fear that, like the other signature sets on the market, the license will become stale over time?

"That can happen," Rowan said. "One nice thing, though, is that KISS has been around forever and there is a lot of licensed material.

"There are enough photographic elements and general material as far as topics and themes that we can put out many sets without duplication that would keep up the interest."

Another way for the company to keep up the interest is to get the people who are most likely to buy the series – KISS fans – involved.

Cornerstone is going to be represented at all the KISS fan conventions this year and has been dealing directly with KISS fan clubs and web sites.

The cards will be sold as part of the band's set up at its concerts this year. Cornerstone has also heavily advertised the set, not only in traditional trading card publications, but magazines such as Goldmine and Metal Edge.

"The Metal Edge advertisement did phenomenally well for us because not all fans are going to go into comic shops and say 'Hey, do you got some KISS cards?" Rowan said.

However, there hasn't been much success at all for music cards in the last 10 to 15 years. Once an industry staple, the series have been regulated to bands and musicians that have disbanded (The Beatles), died (Elvis) or have never really existed (The Monkees).

What makes Rowan so optimistic about KISS?

"The name recognition is there for KISS," he said. "People recognize the logo. They know a KISS song even if they don't know it is by KISS. They know the guy with the tongue. They know the spitting of blood, the breathing of fire. People just know KISS.

"The folks who were into the band in the 1970s were in high school or maybe a little older, well they are now 20 years older.

"They are professionals. They have a lot of money of discretionary money. Now they are looking back nostalgically at this band KISS.

"If we are going to make a card set based on any rock group, (pause, laughs) even more so than the Beatles, KISS is the one. And I think it is going to be a big one."

And Rowan isn,t the only one. In his conversations with the buyer for the Musicland/Sam Goody/Suncoast Video store chains, the buyer said this is going to be the biggest music set ever produced, barring the Elvis series released by The River Group in 1993.

"That's what they tell me," he said.

And Cornerstone had success in music cards with its 1995 series on The Monkees.

"And we think KISS is much more popular than The Monkees," he said.

One can only hope.

"Some titles can make or break a company. We hope that this title makes us."

Five different display boxes highlight set

By Kurt Samuels

Cornerstone releases the first all KISS card set in nearly 20 years in July. But before that series is in stores, the company will produce a nine-card preview set (as it did for Akira in 1994).

The preview set will feature nine cards that will feature artwork not found in the July series," says Cornerstone's Doug Finical. "They will be a representative of a subset that is going to be in the master set."

The suggested retail price will be $10 and will have a production run of 10 percent over preorders. The cards will be distributed through direct market distributors (card and comic shop distributors).

The first master series will be released in late July. Still, in its final production stages as of this writing, the series will contain 90 cards and will feature a discography and concert photos, along with some rare early photos of the band that Cornerstone secured from Lydia Criss, Peter's wife.

"There is some really fascinating shots from early bar gigs in New Jersey; some very strange makeup," he said. "Obviously everything was still in its formative stages."

There will be at least one chase card series, though Cornerstone was still discussing possible printing processes at press time.

In addition to the cards, there will be five different collector display boxes, one featuring the entire band on the front, the others featuring an individual member on the box (a Gene Simmons box, a Peter Criss box, etc.).

The box artwork will be the art used on the four single albums the band released in 1978. There is no difference in the cards in the boxes.

One more thing, the band does preview and approve all designs so KISS is actively involved in the process, Cornerstone's Walter Rowan said.

"They like what has been done so far and have offered suggestions for changes," he said. "It feels like we have the blessing of KISS in that sense."

A second KISS series is scheduled for later in 1997, with a third in 1998 and possibly more beyond that.

It's like that KISS Army revolution all over again.

MARKET REPORT

By Kurt Samuels

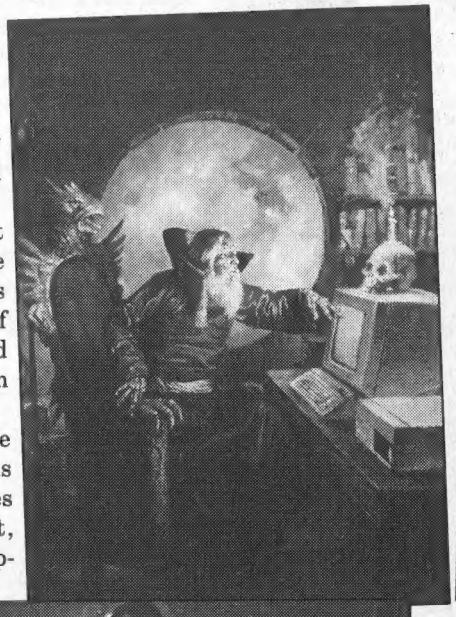
Comic Images is moving forward

The company still pumps out two products per month

When the entertainment market began its downward cycle almost three years ago, those in and outside the industry tried to predict who would take the biggest hit.

The most frequent answer seemed to be Comic Images, which is the Rodney Dangerfield of the entertainment card market; no one takes them seriously.

But while everyone else has made major cutbacks into their titles, employees and quality of product, Comic Images keeps pumping out two products per month.



Despite a slowdown in the hobby, Comic Images still releases two card sets each month

What makes this more amazing is the company lacks a big-name license. Fleer/SkyBox has Star Trek, DC, Marvel, and, until recently, Disney. Topps has Star Wars and X-Files. Krome made its living off Lady Death. WildStorm has Jim Lee's characters and other Image-related products.

And while Comic Images has Olivia and Conan the Barbarian, its strongest titles have been a hodge-podge of product ranging from comics (Shi and Animal Mystic), artwork (Civil War and Wild West) to the bizarre (Elvira: Mistress of the Dark and Julie Strain).

It's not as if Comic Images hasn't struggled like the other card companies during this slowdown, but unlike other companies, it hasn't had any public struggles that suggest the company's downturn.

So how has Comic Images been able to pull through? Co-founder Alan Gordon tells us how.

1. Stay lean: Comic Images produces as many sets as its bigger rivals, however, its staff size is much smaller; tens of employees as compared to hundreds.

"Lean and Mean" is not just a saying, it's a way of business.

"Perhaps we haven't cut as much, because we never had a lot of fat, but we've really tried to cut back through attrition," Gordon said.

"As people have left the company, their tasks have been absorbed because, let's face it, those are some of the steps that allow you to put out that many types of series."

2. Keep costs low across the board: By staying lean, Comic Images keeps its overhead costs low. The company keeps its production costs low by going after licenses in which pick-up art is available which keeps costs low.

And the company prints its cards a little bit over the production run to save on printing costs. All this allows Comic Images to have the some of the lowest pack, box and case prices in the industry.

"We've heard from more than one distributor and dealer to watch the box price; make it affordable for me to carry in my store," Gordon said. "It's a rule."

3. Know your market: Let's face it, unless the Sam Walton family gets mixed up with the Larry Flynt family, there's no way Julie Strain or Olivia cards will ever sell in a retail outlet like Wal-Mart.

But even if Comic Images had a license that would work in this market, it would have to be a huge mass market item for the company to pursue the retail market.

"When you are selling to the hobby shop, they have really dedicated fans," he said. "They are always looking to see what's new.

"They'll speak with the proprietor to see what they like, what's new and what's coming up. So you have a very involved customer. When you are selling to a Wal-Mart, you've got cards in a very small section of the store. You pray that a person who may like Civil War will stop by, might notice your cards and might buy them on the spur of the moment.

"Chances are we are not going to get that customer. So it remains the domain of the sports leagues or the big event licenses such a Star Wars or an X-Files."

Comic Images has done quite well with niche products like Mort Kunstler's Civil War, Blue and the Gray and Wild West sets.

4. Know your audience: "We know for a fact there is a customer out there that wants to purchase entertainment cards that are of high quality and of interesting subject matter, and that goes for Comic Images as well as any of our competitors," Gordon said. "We know there's still retailers out there like that, even though there are fewer who want to support this category.

"But what we are really doing is appealing to a hardcore customer who has an insatiable appetite, whether its Conan, the Civil War, Boris or Olivia, and manufacturing these series in quantities that don't flood the market. We are, in effect, not giving the casual fan a chance to get inundated with product.

"We print a reasonable amount. They are snapped up by the core customers and hopefully the retailer won't (have too much product left unsold)."

"But what we are really doing is appealing to a hardcore customer who has an insatiable appetite, whether its Conan, the Civil War, Boris or Olivia, and manufacturing these series in quantities that don't flood the market."

Alan Gordon
Comic Images' co-founder

5. Know your licenses: Even Gordon will admit that he's not sure why some Comic Images cards sell. But what he doesn't know, Comic Images' other co-founder Hank Rose does.

According to Gordon, Rose is good at identifying market niches that "any person, even myself, would pass on or would not make sense."

"I think the Mort Kunster Civil War cards are a good example," Gordon said. "Hank came up to me and said, 'Want to do a set on the Civil War?' And I said, 'What are you going to do? Battlesites have been done. Characters have been done.' And he says come look at this artist. He then shows me Mort. Hank then says, 'He's a great artist, it's great subject matter and you're marrying a lot of strong attributes here. It will work. I think it's really a testimony to Hank's skill (in selecting licenses)."

Of course, while everything Comic Images does is not golden (such as that Julie Strain set), Comic Images and its imprint DuoCards, should be commended for attempting to producing quality product at reasonable rates. Pack prices are at $1.29-$1.50 for most of the company's products, with box prices in the $30-$45 range for all product.

The company may not get the same respect as the big boys with their big-event licenses, but Comic Images has earned some much deserved credit over the years.

A change: Public relations people must be a dime a dozen in this market because companies go through them quicker than North Dakota flood victims go through sandbags.

Top Dog Marketing President George White, who did the PR work for Fleer/SkyBox, moved to Gibson Greeting Cards to work with former SkyBox President Frank O'Connell.

Phoenix Communications took over Top Dog and the Fleer/SkyBox account.

Inkworks dropped its New York City bigwig PR company, HWH, and went with Kate Travaline as their new PR person. Travaline also handles PR for Comic Images and DuoCards.

The silver screen: While Marvel entertainment cards seemed to hit the skids as of late, the superheroes are trying to make a big hit on the silver screen.

Marvel characters are being optioned and developed for flicks to studios, including "Captain America" for Paramount Pictures, "Silver Surfer," "The X-Men," "Iron Man" and "The Fantastic Four" (hopefully it will do better than the last Fantastic Four project that never saw the light of day three years ago) for 20th Century Fox and "Dr. Strange" for Columbia Pictures.

Others being developed into films are "The Sub-Mariner" by director Philip Kaufman and "The Incredible Hulk" by Gale Ann Hurd.

DC is not out of the picture. Tim Burton, who directed the first two "Batman" movies along with "Mars Attacks!," is in line for the new "Superman" flick.

Kevin Smith, who directed "Clerks" and "Mallrats," was writing the Superman script, but has been given the boot by Burton.

Nicholas Cage will don the tights as the lead in the film, with possibly Jim Carrey as the villain.

And, of course, don't forget the live-action "Spawn" film due out in August with cards by Inkworks.

This ends the "Entertainment Tonight" section of the Market Report.

Chick slick: Not everyone thinks the entertainment card market is dead. Studio E is the latest to try their hand in the marketplace with a late 1997 release.

The series is called Chopper Chicks From Mars (not related to that Biker Mice from Mars, though that would make a strange combination).

The set is about scantily clad women fighting futuristic monsters with spaced-out weapons. The set will have 60 cards with three levels of chasers. In addition, nine promo cards are being distributed through card conventions, magazines and other outlets.

Melrose Place cards rescheduled for October

After a long delay, Melrose Place cards will be released in October by Sports Time. The set was held back because the company wanted to include voting ballots in its packs for Fox-TV's "Melrose Place Awards" special, which has been put on the shelf.

"The only way people could vote is to buy the trading card packs. Of course, we wanted to be a part of that," Sports Time's Jonathan Richman said. "We waited and waited, and there was still no commitment on the show, so finally a year later we said we have to get this product out."

The 100-card base set will feature the cast of the show. Randomly inserted autographed cards of past and present cast members will be randomly inserted.

Comic Images listing non-sports trade shows on bottom of boxes

Comic Images has begun printing a non-sports trade show listing on the bottom of each box, beginning with The Blue and the Gray.

Listed for each show are the dates, the site, city, state, promoter's name and phone number. Trade shows scheduled through mid-October are featured.

"All of us (manufacturers, dealers, the hobby media and the collectors) are in this together," Comic Images vice president of sales/marketing Arnie Harris said. "Our main goal should be to entice more people into collecting cards. Getting them to these shows is one way of doing it."

Star Trek Encounters Game delayed until fall

Star Trek: The Card Game Alien Encounters expansion set has been delayed until fall by Fleer/SkyBox.

"With the large number of game releases this summer, we did not want Alien Encounters to get lost in the shuffle," said Steve Domzalski, marketing manager of Marvel and games for Fleer/SkyBox.

Bonus Star Wars cards promote Vehicles set

Topps is providing an extra redemption card specifically for retailers on top of each case in the Star Wars Vehicles series.

In addition, Topps produced postcards that include one Top Cow image and one cutaway image on the front and contain additional information on the set.

Topps will also hand out promo cards at the Comic Con International in San Diego.

12 unpublished artworks from 1940 added to Dart's Lone Ranger series

The Lone Ranger set, to be issued by Dart Flipcards in late June, will include 12 unpublished artworks from the 1940 Gum Inc. set.

The cards measure 2½ x 3⅜ inches, which is identical to the 1940 Gum Inc. set. They will be numbered 49-60.

In 1939, Gum Inc. commissioned 60 Lone Ranger artworks to be painted for use in a card series. During the 1930s and 1940s, it was common practice to issue card sets in small successive series.

Twelve artworks were never published because Gum Inc. decided to print cards based on World War II instead of finishing the Lone Ranger series.

Dart will print 2,600 numbered sets, with 1,700 going to the family of artist Charles H. Steinbacher, 100 going to the writer of the card backs and 250 sets used by Dart as case toppers in its Lone Ranger series.

For more information, call (514) 856-6824.

1960-80s single cards hot at sixth Chicago show

The Sixth Annual Chicago Non-Sports Card Show was a success for most of the dealers.

Friday's attendance was the highest, with crowds lining up before the show.

Ron Gahan of Pak Ratt in Detroit, Mich, said singles from 1960-80s were hot sellers, especially Gilligan's Island, Hogan's Heroes and 1953 Topps Wings.

Mike Bowman of Barrington Square said Star Wars, X-Files, 1950s cards and stickers were good sellers.

According to Barry Sanders of Atlanta Sports Collectibles in Tucker, Ga., food issues, promo cards and older singles were excellent sellers at his table.

This show, by AU Sports Memorabilia, was an excellent place for selling older cards.

Remember those old of Welcome Back, Kotter and Charlie's Angels boxes you had sitting around in the 1970s? Well, they're now up to $125 each, according to dealer Mark Macaluso.

Turning Back the Clock

1955 Topps Fabian

Cards in set: 55.

Card fronts: The teen heartthrob of the 1950s is featured in color photos on the front with white borders.

The card caption is printed in white inside a red box. An album is also included with the red box.

Card backs: Card numbers are printed in the upper left inside a circle, while a feature called "Tell Us Fabian" fills up the back. The question from a fan is at the top, with Fabian's answer in the center. Fabian's facsimile autograph and caricature is located at the bottom.

Card size: 2½ x 3½ inches.

Set value: $115-$125.

Single card value: $2-$3.25.

Set notes: According to the Sport Americana Price guide to the Non-Sports Cards, this set was met with lackadaisical response from collectors at its time of release. This prompted Topps to sell it off in "bricks" of 500 cards sold in generic "variety" boxes.

1981 Fleer Here's Bo

Cards in set: 72, plus 12 posters.

Card fronts: Color photos, which were all taken by Bo Derek's husband John, are scenes from the yawner "Tarzan" movie and other shots of her surfing and other publicity stills. The "Here's Bo" logo, card caption and card number are included at the bottom.

Card backs: Include a piece of a puzzle – 54 cards to be exact. There are three puzzle preview cards and 15 "Life Story of Bo Derek" backs.

Card size: 2½ x 3½ inches.

Poster size: 7 1⅜ x 9½ inches.

Set value: $5-$8.

Single card value: 25 cents.

1940 Gum Inc. Lone Ranger

Cards in set: 48.

Card fronts: White-bordered cards includes color artwork of the adventures of the Lone Ranger and Tonto.

Card backs: Details about the scene on the front of the card are written up, with the title of the card at the top and the card No. in the upper left.

Card size: 2½ x 3⅛ inches.

Set value: $2,700-$3,300.

Single card price: $25-$30.

Set notes: The final 12 cards in the set are the toughest to locate.

Related set: A five-card Lone Ranger Premium 8 x 10 card set was also produced by Gum Inc. in 1938 for its Lone Ranger Bubble Gum product.

Each color artwork card was available from Gum Inc. in exchange for wrappers. The card back are labeled "Series A," however, no subsequent series were produced.

Card No. 1 (Tonto Saves the Lone Ranger) is the hardest to find in the set.

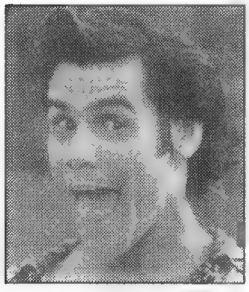
Here's your Gilligan's Island cast

Carey, Goodman lead the way in voting from readers

When we asked the readers to pick a cast for an upcoming "Gilligan's Island" movie, we knew we would get plenty of great, interesting and downright weird responses in the mail.

We received nearly 200 responses, and on many of those ballots Jim Carrey was penciled in as Gilligan. Coming in a distant second was Martin Short. The most interesting Gilligan vote had to be for Ellen DeGeneres.

As for the Skipper, it was a close run between John Goodman and Tom Arnold. Thankfully, the actor with the most talent – obviously Goodman – was victorious. With Arnold playing Skipper, this movie would have been a dog at the box office.



Jim Carrey won the role of Gilligan by a landslide.

The Thurston Howell III character went down to the wire, or in this instance, the final envelope. Kelsey Grammer won by one vote over Steve Martin, Walter Matthau and Leslie Nielsen, who each tied for second place.

Bette Midler took the honors to play Lovey Howell, with Angela Lansbury, Carol Burnett and Joan Collins following close on her coattails.

Cindy Crawford will be Ginger. This is probably the most logical choice. After all, she's got the figure, the hair and the mole at the corner of her mouth. We also received a vote for Dennis Rodman as Ginger. No thanks, we'd rather see Mimi from "The Drew Carey Show." Jenny McCarthy would be a great second choice as Ginger.

Dan Aykroyd won the role as the Professor, with Rick Moranis coming in a close second. Julia Louis Dreyfus barely beat out Sandra Bullock to be Mary Ann.

Thanks to everyone who entered.

The winners

Gilligan: Jim Carrey
Skipper: John Goodman
Mr. Howell: Kelsey Grammer

Dart brings back 'Gilligan's Island,' Munsters II

Just sit right back ... Gilligan's Island trading cards will be issued by Dart Flipcards in late August/early September.

It will be the first licensed Gilligan set since Topps released a 55-card series in 1965. Dart will produce 300 cases of the 72-card set.

"More people are familiar with Gilligan than ER," Dart President Dino Frisella said. "We don't guess anymore. We don't say we think this is going to be a good title. When you are working in a soft market you can't afford to get hit. It's simply numbers."

Bob Denver has offered to write the card backs for Dart's "Gilligan's Island" set, which is scheduled to be released in late August/early September.

Autographed cards of living cast members will be inserted. Bob Denver, who played Gilligan, has offered to write card backs.

Munsters Series II also will be released in late August/early September.

Dart will produce 300 cases of the 72-card set, which will boast inserted autographs of cast members. Also on Dart's docket are Lone Ranger and Sailor Moon for late-June. Battlestar Galactica Series II is slated for later this year.

"When we decided to do the Munsters there wasn't too much activity on classic programs and suddenly we did the Munsters and then a half-dozen other people announced they were coming out with shows of this and shows of that," Frisella said.
